

Downy Woodpecker

(Dryobates pubescens)

- Downy woodpeckers don't sing songs but they drum loudly against wood to achieve the same effect as singing
- These tiny woodpeckers mainly live in dead trees or dead parts of trees in open woodland areas
- Downy woodpeckers mainly eat insects that live inside wood or trees but they also will eat plant material like seeds and berries

- Size: Small
- Color: Black with white spots on the wings and a white belly. Males have small red feathers on the back of their head