

Indigo Bunting

(Passerina cyanea)

- Indigo Buntings migrate at night and use the stars to help them navigate
- These birds eat a wide variety of small seeds, berries, plant buds, and insects
- Indigo bunting males learn their songs very young from nearby males who sing

- Size: Extra Small
- Color: Male is a very rich blue all over. Females are brown with a little blue sometimes on the wings or tail

